

English Homework on March 27th, 2024 on websleuths.

- 1) Websleuths are « amateurs competing online to solve cases. »
- 2) Websleuths investigate cases involving disappearances, unidentified bodies, and instances where individuals have been murdered, dumped, or unclaimed.
- 3) Temperance's opinion of websleuths is somewhat critical. She refers to them as "Wannabe forensic scientists and cops" and suggests that they are overzealous viewers of crime, she doesn't outright dismiss their efforts, as she later engages with Hazel Strike in a conversation about the importance of solving cases involving forgotten or unidentified dead.
- 4) Hazel Strike believes what they do is important because they focus on cases where individuals have disappeared or died under mysterious circumstances, often without the recognition or closure that comes with traditional funeral rites. Strike highlights the prevalence of such cases and emphasizes that websleuthing provides a means to address this issue by attempting to solve them and bring closure to the families and communities affected.
